On 21 December 1950 in a speech held at the Youth Center in Split, the Secretary of the Central Committee of the Croatian Communist Party, Jure Bilic, stated among other things: We must guard ourselves from the reactionary capitalism, imperialism, et cetera, of the Western Democracies. The momentary collaboration with the West should be considered only as a sad necessity imposed upon us by circumstances: it serves only to obtain the help of which Yugoslavia has such need.
